

HELLRAISERTEN

Hellraiserten is a Copenhagen based duo and consists of the gentlemen Jacob Høegh and Jonas Djernes. The two have played in other constellations, until they decided to form Hellraiserten in 2005. The music is melancholic and thoughtful, with catchy themes and well-dosed portions of rock. Hellraiserten refers to their music as "slo-fi" but please do your self a favour and listen to the album a couple of times before deciding on an impression. It will not be difficult, as Hellraiserten is present everywhere in the sound image, on certain tracks in a quite massive way, and on others whispering and merely touching the instruments.

It's minimalist, bedroomlike songs you could hear in the night - but be aware of that band being named after a horror movie that's even rated in Germany. You will get lullabies on wild bears, loss, destruction, war and a trip all down to hell. Hellraiserten is lots of guitars, electronic as well as acoustic, vintage synthesizers, vocal harmonies, and of course Jacob Høegh's soft and gentle vocal.

The self-titled debut has been recorded in the rehearsal studio and Jacob's bed room, which increases the feeling of an emotional and tender record. The album is mixed & mastered by Danish producer Morten Bue, summer 2008 and will be available from October 1, 2008 at Front/All Records, a sub label to Quartermain Records who, among others, have released Dói, Death By Kite and Jacob Faurholt.
